Versus

Praveen Kumar @ SonuOpposite party/ Respondent

Present:- Pramod Kumar Pankaj, Principal Judge, Darbhanga

Later on: Both sides are present in person.
15.07.2026 Heard and perused record.

Petitioner has filed case under Section 144 BNSS against the opposite party for maintenance. Party jointly stated that the matter got compromised in the mediation and prayed to dispose the case.

Heard and perused record.

In the light of the aforesaid submission, the joint statement of applicant and respondent recorded on S.A. It is stated that amicable settlement arrived between them at mediation centre. In terms of settlement, the applicant agreed to receive lump-sum amount of Rs.7,00,000/-(seven lakhs) towards permanent alimony and maintenance covering (past, present and future) and value of stridhan. The parties further stated now they do not want to proceed with this case further. It is further stated by both parties that on the basis of mutual settlement, they intend to obtain decree of divorce on the basis of mutual consent. It is jointly stated that they had taken decision without any coercion, under influence being in a sound mind and health. They further stated that they have no objection if this case is disposed of on the basis of compromise.

Heard and perused the case record, it appears that both sides have agreed to settle their dispute. Hence, this is fit case to be disposed of, on the basis of amicable settlement.

Accordingly, this maintenance case is disposed of, on the basis of compromise/amicable settlement.
