

Order Below Exhibit-1

State of Gujarat
VS

(1) In the present case the grievance of the state for violation of the provision of the Gujarat Police Act, 1951 (Here in after referred as The Act) is redressed before this court, through the submission of the Charge sheet against the accused for violation of the section 142 G.P Act under section 173 (2) of The Criminal Procedure Code, 1973. Submission of the charge sheet in every violation of the Provisions of The Act, requires scrutiny by the court.

(2) That the basic purpose of The Act is embedded in the preventive measures taken by the police, such preventive measures are often spontaneous and requires arrest without warrant, otherwise without such power the preventive measures will become infectious. After the preventive measures are taken and when circumstances so require then the situation ripes into registration of case, but such registration shall be non-cognizable or cognizable as described in the Act, itself i.e section 90 A is declared cognizable through its sub clause (4) and section 118 through its sub clause 1C thus whenever legislature intends to make particular provision cognizable, the same is specifically made while rest are left undeclared.

(3) In this Act, there are certain provisions, for instance section 72, 73, 79, 80, 81 wherein a police officer has been given the power to arrest but nowhere it is written that for violation of these sections, the offence is made cognizable. In this Act no absolute power of arrest is given to police but limited power of arrest is given like under section 62 if externment order is passed against any person under section 55, 56, 57 and 57-A and that person fails to remove himself or having removed but enters without permission or breached condition of permission then that person be arrested and removed in police custody to such place outside the area as that authority may in each case prescribed. Similarly limited power of arrest is given to police in section 79 of this Act when any offence punishable under section 117 or section 125 or section 130 or sub section (I), (IV) or (V) of section 131 r Cl (i) of section 135 in respect of contradiction of any order made in section 39 or 40 if committed in the presence of police. It means if offence is not committed in the presence of police then police has no power to arrest without warrant. Similar power of arrest like in section 42 Cr. P. C is given to police under section 81 where if non-cognizable offence is committed in the presence of police then police has power to arrest without warrant. If we correlate power of police to arrest without warrant as cognizable offence then it means if non cognizable offence is committed in presence of the police then the offence becomes cognizable one and police get the power to investigate the non cognizable offence without the permission of concerned magistrate, Legislation specifically in schedule- I part I make the offence in IPC as cognizable or non-cognizable, bailable or non-bailable and for other laws clearly made the provision in schedule-I part II that if punishment prescribed by law is for less than three years or fine or with both then the offence is non-cognizable one. From these provisions it is therefore, clear that whenever the Legislature wants to give power to the police officers to effect an arrest of a person or to investigate into an offence falling under any of the provisions of The Act, they have accordingly so provided, but so far as section 142 of the Act is concerned, there is no such reference is given to investigate the offence without prior permission of the competent Magistrate. Further the offence cannot be said to be cognizable, only because a power is conferred to arrest any person committing such offence, without warrant. It is clear from The Finance Act 1994, that only power to arrest does not makes the offence cognizable or non-cognizable. In Finance Act Legislature has given power of arrest in section 91, though the offence is non-cognizable one and also bifurcates cognizable and non cognizable offences in section 89.

(4) Section 142 of The Act does not specifically prescribe, whether the offence is cognizable or non-cognizable and therefore, in the absence of any such specific reference therein in order to determine as to whether an offence under section 142 of The Act is cognizable or non-cognizable, one has to fall back upon the definition contained under section 2(c) and 2(1) read with part II of the First Schedule of the Criminal Procedure Code. If one read these provisions together then there can be no manner of doubt that the offence under section 142 of The Act is non-cognizable. Now the question arises in non-cognizable offence which of the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code would govern the investigation in the cases like the present.

(5) In Keshav Lal Thakur v. State of Bihar, 1996 (11) SCC 557 Hon'ble Supreme Court of India held as under:- We need not go into the question whether in the facts of the instant case the above view of the High Court is proper or not for the impugned proceeding has got to be quashed as neither the police was entitled to investigate into the offence in question nor the Chief Judicial Magistrate to take cognizance upon the report submitted on completion of such investigation. On the own showing of the police, the offence under Section 31 of The Act is non cognizable and therefore the police could not have registered a case for such an offence under Section 154 Cr.P.C of course, the police is entitled to investigate into a non-cognizable offence pursuant to an order of a competent Magistrate under Section 155(2) Cr. P.C but, admittedly no such order was passed in the instant case. That necessarily means, that neither the police could investigate into the offence in question nor submit a report on which the question of taking cognizance could have arisen. While on this point, it may be mentioned that in view of the proviso to Section 2 (d) Cr.P.C , which defines "complaint", the police is entitled to submit, after investigation a report a relating to a non-cognizable offence in which case such a report is to be treated as a "complaint" of the police officer concerned, but that explanation will not be available to the prosecution here as that related to case where the police initiates investigation into a cognizable offence - unlike the present one - but ultimately finds that only a non cognizable offence has been made out. On the conclusions as above we allow this appeal and quash the impugned proceedings.

(6) That the Hon'ble High Court of Gujarat in the case of Waghari Vs State of Gujarat on 14th December, 2009 in Criminal Misc. Application No. 15226 of 2007 observed that even if the section 79 and 80 of The Act empower the police officer to cause arrest of the petitioner, there is no provision pointed out either in The Act or under the Criminal Procedure Code to show as to how the entire incident was investigated without permission of the Magistrate. Admittedly the offence alleged was non-cognizable offence. Under section 155(2) of The Criminal Procedure Code, therefore no police officer could have investigated such an offence without order of Magistrate having power to try such a case.

(7) Gujarat Police Act is made for maintaining public peace and order and power of arrest is given to police for urgent action so that for every breach of order police has to rush to concerned Magistrate for taking permission to arrest. In this case it is clear that maximum punishment prescribed is not more than two years and no absolute power of arrest is given to police and as per schedule-I part II of Cr.P.C, this offence is non-cognizable one.

(8) It is established that in cognizable case police has power to arrest and investigate without the permission of concerned magistrate and subsequently police filed charge sheet under section 173 of Cr.P.C/ 193 of BNSS but if power to arrest only is given under any law then as per above discussion it does not mean that police automatically get the power to investigate the offence without prior permission of the concerned Magistrate. In the present case that there is no confusion in the mind of the Investigation Officer that he is going to investigate only offence of section 142 G.P Act and such investigation is carried out by the police in respect of Non-cognizable offence without the prior permission of the concerned Magistrate under section 155 (2) of Criminal Procedure Code/174 of BNSS, which is illegal and bad in law.

(9) Upon discussion of aforesaid provision of law and Judgment Pronounced by Hon'ble Supreme Court in Keshav Lal (Supra), it is clear that if police investigated non-cognizable offence without the prior permission of the concerned magistrate and subsequently filed the charge sheet then as per law it is not proper for the Court to take cognizance or to conduct the trial on that charge sheet. So, this court passes the following final order in the interest of Justice

Final Order

The Proceeding against the accused person u/s 142 of G.P.Act is hereby dropped with liberty to prosecution to take such steps as he deems fit in accordance with law. If any muddamal recovered shall be disposed in accordance with law.
