The parties to the suit have filed a compromise petition U/o XXIII Rule 3 of CPC.

The parties who were present before the Court in person had identified each other and are also identified by their Advocates on the last date of hearing. Hence, I am satisfied that they are the parties to the suit.

Learned counsels and the parties to the suit have already made their supporting submissions to the contents of the compromise petition under consideration. They have also submitted that the compromise has been entered on their own free will and volition without any force, compulsion, coercion or undue influence.

The contents of the compromise petition have also been read over to the parties in open Court, who appeared to have fully understood the same and jointly occurred to its contents.

I am convinced that both sides have the requisite knowledge of the contents of the compromise petition and of its consequences.

A perusal of the compromise petition goes to show that the terms of the compromise petition are not in violation of any law and in the best interest of both the parties. Therefore, the compromise petition is taken on record and the same is allowed. Accordingly, the following –

ORDER

The suit is decreed in terms of the compromise petition.

The compromise petition shall form part and parcel of the compromise/ Final decree.

Office is directed to draw the compromise/ Final Decree in terms of compromise petition after receipts of necessary stamp papers.
