ORDER

Present case has come to this court by way of transfer. Matter being transferred, notice was issued to the complainant to remain present with his advocate on adjournment date, But notice was returned unserved due to change of complainant's address. Then after, many times notice was issued to the complainant but it returned unserved with the same reason. Still matter was kept alive for sometime in the interest of justice that either complainant or his advocate may come to follow the status of his case. But neither complainant nor his advocate has approached this court till this day.

In private complaint, it is the responsibility of the complainant to follow his case. Still at the occasion of transfer, by practice, Court issues notice in the interest of justice to the complainant to intimate him about the transfer of his case. If complainant changes his address then court can do nothing. If complainant changes his address then he must intimate regarding this fact to the court. In private complaint, Court can't do much except issuance of notice on matter being transferred.

So, Present case is hereby dismissed for default for the lack of prosecution.

Pronounced in open court today.
