Order on Board

23-04-2026

1. Learned counsel for the appellant, at the outset, would submit that the trial before the learned trial Court has already over and the appellant has been convicted by the learned trial Court and therefore, the present criminal appeal, which is in fact a bail application of the appellant, has become infructuous. He would also submit that appeal has already been filed against his conviction before this Court.
2. On due consideration and submission made by learned counsel for the appellant, the present criminal appeal is dismissed as having become infructuous.
