N.SESHASAYEE, J.

The matter had gone for trial during which the learned counsel for the petitioner was keen to mark certain documents, which according to the contesting respondent are neither certified copies nor authenticated copies, but are mere printouts from the official website of the Trademarks Registry, which itself carries a disclaimer that the same cannot be used for any legal purposes.

2.The learned counsel for the petitioner submits that these documents have already been marked by his client before the District Court, Delhi and the originals are available there and that the contesting respondent knew it only too well.
