The Court:- It was recorded in the order dated April 25, 2025 that a last chance was given to the alleged contemnor to obtain an order from the Appellate Court in connection with the appeal which has been preferred against the parent order. It was further recorded that in default, appropriate order shall be passed in connection with the Rule.

Even today, when the matter is called on for hearing, the learned Advocate General, appearing on behalf of the alleged contemnor, submits that due to no fault of the alleged contemnor, the appeal could not be heard as yet.

The Court is further apprised that there has since been a change of determination of the Appellate Bench.

Keeping such alteration of determination in view, I keep the contempt application for hearing on June 13, 2025.

It is made abundantly clear that on the returnable date, unless any order is passed by the Appellate Bench in the interregnum, the contempt application and the connected Rule shall be taken up for hearing.
